Mrs. Lawson Guest Speaker At Blue Ridge DAR Meeting

Mrs. J. Raymond Lawson was the guest speaker at a meeting of the Blue Ridge Daughters of the American Revolution Chapter on Thursday of last week in Lynchburg.

Mrs. Lawson was quite impressed with Red Square, the 65 acre enclosure of palaces, cathedrals and office buildings, and said "The Kremlin's Royal Armory is laden with jewels appraised at billions of dollars."

However the speaker said she grew weary of long lines and red tape which she experienced, no matter what the occasion.

"Moscow was fabulous, fascinating and quite frustrating," she remarked and added, "We never love our country more than when we are in another county. I've found this to be true on more than one occasion."

Other options include forward contracting, hedging the crop through the use of futures markets, periodic partial sales, as well as combinations of the various techniques, Mr. Ford said. Producers interested in utilizing the commodity loan program should contact the county ASCS office.

Where have all the raisins gone?

Recently there has been a shortage of raisins. They should be returned to your grocer's shelves at an increased price.

Numerous reasons attributed to the shortage. Such factors as weather, increased popularity of "pop wines" and increased world demand helped produce this shortage and future price increases.

An additional deterrent, lack of transportation, from the producer to the retailer, has caused delay in the appearance of this year's crop on the market. Perhaps substitutions of dried apples, apricots, dates or figs would be a tasty change.

Extension Services are Getting Youth Involved In Community

Youth should become more involved with adults in community development and educational programs across the Nation. Extension Services are already doing much to involve youth in community development.

Still, we have really only scratched the surface of the great potential input youth can make in the community development thrust nationally.

Youth want to learn about their communities-community systems and the community decision-making process.

Since its beginning, 4-H Club for purposes of individual youth development and for the development of Skills in interpersonal relations. Now, in addition, we believe that it is time to give increased attention to the broader responsibilities of youth involvement in the total community.

Youth reaction to rapid change in our society has created a need to give renewed consideration to the question of what constitutes adequate citizenship. I believe that involvement of youth in community development will provide unique opportunities for youth to find an answer to that question. The other side of the coin is that the capabilities of youth are needed in developing communites. Youth have the right to be involved.

There many different points of view on youth involvement in Community Development. For example: Some of you are probably fully supportive of the view that youth should be involved in community development. Some probably want to know how that can be done. Others may question that it should be done. Whatever your views, each of you is asked to share your ideas with others. Please contact your Appomattox County Extension Office 352-8244, and ask for Karen Jo Green, your area 4-H CRD Agent. If I am not in, others in the office will be happy to help you with your problem.

Thank you,
